

BRADDOCK OF ADBASTON, STAFFS

Eccleshall-water taketh its beginning westwardly, but not far from ADBASTON. 20 Conq. [1086] the bishop held Elbaldeston, now Adbaston, [c] of the king, being now the seat of the Bradokes, which I take to be, ab origine, Cheshire men, and descended from the Lostocks; for so I have seen a piece of evidence importing; for Ricardus, filius Ricardi Lostock, dedit Ricardo filio Letitie de Tabelegh terram suam apud Barndock; of which lands, no doubt, the Bradokes took their surname: moreover, it would also seem, by Bradoke's armory being Argent, a greyhound in a bordure engrailed sable, and Lostock's is Argent, une lourier sable, without the bordure; and, about Edward the Fourth's time [1461-1483] one of his ancestors married the only daughter and heir of sir John Griffin, of Cheshire, knight, another argument of their being of Cheshire. [ERDESWICK (1844) 125-6]

ARMS: (1) [Argent] a greyhound passant collared [.....] within a bordure engrailed [.....] (c1467, KING) (2) Argent a greyhound courant sable within a bordure engrailed sable (1583)
